

The image shows a single, severely damaged page from an old manuscript. The paper is a light cream or yellowish color, showing significant signs of age and environmental damage. Large, irregular holes of varying sizes are scattered across the surface, particularly along the right edge and bottom. There are also several dark, irregular stains, possibly from water or oil. The text is written in a dense, cursive Gothic script, which is very difficult to decipher due to the damage. Some larger, more distinct words and lines are visible, suggesting it might be a formal document like a charter or a legal agreement. The overall appearance is one of great age and physical wear.

Foto somatis de Cazepane publicis iuris facturæ notarii filio & Vicario. Hoc instrumentum deditio eius apud plaz Postarmo reddi et scripti mei. Salissini.

1493 105

Morsio 32, 1.

Venditio petralij et flum et portafons de plataloneta eis fratribus p. Frantzstrum domini duximus et rectas obachus