ACT 1. SCENE, Count Baldwin's House.

Enter Villeroy and Carlos.

CARLOS.

THIS conflancy of yours will establish an immortal reputation among the women.

Vil. If it would eliablish me with Isabella ---

Car. Follow her, follow her: Troy town was won at last.

Vil. I have follow'd her these seven years, and now but live in hopes.

Car. But live in hopes! Why, hope is the ready road, the lover's baiting place; and for aught you know, but one stage short of the possession of your mistress.

Vil. But my hopes, I fear, are more of my own making than her's; and proceed rather from my wishes, than any encouragement she has given me.

Car. That I can't tell: the fex is very various: there are no certain measures to be prescribed or follow'd, in making our approaches to the women. All that we have to do, I think, is to attempt 'em in the weakest part. Press them but hard, and they will all fall under the necessity of a furrender at last. That favour comes at once; and sometimes when we least expect it.

Vil. I shall be glad to find it fo.

Car. You will find it fo. Every place is to be taken, that is not to be reliev'd: she must comply.

Vil. I'm going to visit her.

Car. What interest a brother in law can have with her, depend upon.

Vil. I know your interest, and I thank you.

Car. You are prevented; see, the mourner comes: She weeps, as seven years were seven hours;

So fresh, unfading, is the memory

Of my poor brother's, Biron's, death:

I leave you to your opportunity. [Exit Vil. Tho' I have taken care to root her from our house,

I would transplant her into Villeroy's

There

Perhaps, at last, the seeks my father's doors; They shall be shut, and he prepar'd to give The beggar and her brat a cold reception. That boy's an adder in my path—they come, I'll stand a-part, and watch their motions.

Enter Villeroy, with Isabella and her little Son.

Isa. Why do you follow me? you know I am
A bankrupt every way; too far engag'd
Ever to make return; I own you have been
More than a brother to me, my friend:
And at a time when friends are found no more,
A friend to my misfortunes.

Vil. I must be always your friend.

I/a. I have known, and found you

Truly my friend; and would I could be yours;

But the unfortunate cannot be friends:

Fate watches the first motions of the foul,
To disappoint our wishes; if we pray

For bleffings, they prove curfes in the end,
To ruin all about us.' Pray be gone,

Take warning, and be happy. Vil. Happiness!

There's none for me without you: 'Riches, name,

Health, fame, distinction, place, and quality,
Are the incumbrances of groaning life,
To make it but more tedious without you.'
What serve the goods of fortune for? To raise
My hopes, that you at last will share them with me.

Long life itself, the universal prayer,
And heav'n's reward of well-defervers here,

Would prove a plague to me; to fee you always,

And never see you mine! still to desire,

And never to enjoy!'

1/a. I must not hear you.

Pil.

Vil. Thus, at this awful distance, I have serv'd A seven year's bondage—Do I call it bondage, When I can never with to be redeem'd? No, let me rather linger out a life Of expectation, that you may be mine, Than be restor'd to the indifference Of seeing you, without this pleasing pain: I've lost myself, and never would be found, But in these arms.

Isa. Oh, I have heard all this!

But must no more—the charmer is no more:

My buried husband rifes in the face

Of my dear boy, and chides me for my stay:

Canst thou forgive me, child?

Child. Why, have you done a fault? You cry as if you had. Indeed now, I've done nothing to offend you: but if you kifs me, and look fo very fad upon me, I shall cry too.

Ifa. My little angel, no, you must not cry:

Sorrow will overtake thy steps too foon:

I should not hasten it.

The arguments that make against my hopes
Prevail upon my heart, and fix me more;
Those pious tears you hourly throw away
Upon the grave, have all their quick ning charms,
And more engage my love, to make you mine:
When yet a virgin, free, and undispos'd,
I lov'd, but saw you only with my eyes;
I could not reach the beauties of your soul:
I have fince liv'd in contemplation,
And long experience of your growing goodness:
What then was passion, is my judgment now,
Thro' all the several changes of your life,
Confirm'd and settled in adoring you.

Ifa. Nay, then I must be gone. If you're my friend, If you regard my little interest,
No more of this; you see, I grant you all
That friendship will allow: be still my friend;
That's all I can receive, or have to give.
I'm going to my father; he needs not an excuse
To use me ill: pray leave me to the trial.

A 3

Vil.

Vil. I'm only born to be what you would have me, The creature of your power, and must obey; In every thing obey you. I am going:

But all good fortune go along with you.

1/a. I shall need all your wishes—

[Knocks.

Lock'd! and fast!
Where is the charity that us'd to sland
In our forefather's hospitable days
At great men's doors, ready for our wants,
Like the good angel of the family

Like the good angel of the family,
With open arms taking the needy in,

To feed and cloath, to comfort and relieve 'em? Now even their gates are shut against their poor.

[She knocks again.

Samp. Well, what's to do now, I trow? You knock as loud as if you were invited; and that's more than I heard of; but I can tell you, you may look twice about you for a welcome in a great man's family, before you find it, unless you bring it along with you.

Isa. I hope I bring my welcome along with me:

Is your lord at home?

Samp. My lord at home!

Isa. Count Baldwin lives here still?

Samp. Ay, ay, Count Baldwin does live here; and I am his porter; but what's that to the purpose, good woman, of my lord's being at home?

1/a. Why, don't you know me, friend?

Samp. Not I, not I, millress; I may have feen you before, or fo; but men of employment must forget their acquaintance; especially such as we are never to be the better for. [Going to shut the door, Nurse enters.

Nurse. Handsomer words would become you, and mend your manners, Sampson: do you know who you prate to?

I/a. I am glad you know me, nurse.

Nurse. Marry, heav'n forbid, Madam, that I should ever forget you, or my little jewel: pray go in [Isabella goes in with her child] Now my blessing go along with you, wherever you go, or whatever you are about. Fie, Sampson, how could'st thou be such a Saracen? A Turk would have been a better Christian, than to have done so barbarously by so good a lady.

Samp. Why look you, nurse, I know you of old: by your good-will you would have a finger in every body's pie, but mark the end on't; if I am called to account about it, I know what I have to say.

Nurse. Marry come up here; say your pleasure, and spare not. Refuse his eldest son's widow, and your child, the comfort of seeing him? She does not trouble him so often.

Samp. Not that I am against it, nurse, but we are but servants, you know: we must have no likings, but our lord's; and must do as we are ordered.

· Nurse. Nay, that's true, Sampson.

Samp. Besides, what I did was all for the best: I have no ill-will to the young lady, as a body may fay, upon my own account; only that I hear she is poor; and indeed I naturally hate your decayed gentry; they expect as much waiting upon as when they had money in their pockets, and were able to con-

" fider us for the trouble.

Nurse. Why, that is a grievance indeed in great families, where the gifts, at good times, are better than the wages. It would do well to be reformed."

Samp. But what is the business, nurse? You have been in the samily before I came into the world: what's the reason, pray, that this daughter-in-law, who has so good a report in every body's mouth, is so little set by, by my lord?

Nurfe. Why, I tell you, Sampson, more or lefs: I'll tell the truth, that's my way, you know, without adding or diminishing.

Samp. Ay, marry, nurse.

Nurse. My lord's eldest fon, Biron by name, the fon of his bosom, and the fon that he would have lov'd best, if he had as many as king Pyramus of Troy.

Samp. How! King Pyramus of Troy! Why,

" how many had he?

Nurse. Why, the ballet fings he had fifty fons; but no matter for that.' This Biron, as I was faying, was a lovely sweet gentleman, and indeed, nobody could blame his father for loving him: he was a fon for the king of Spain; God bless him, for I was his nurse. But now I come to the point, Sampson; this Ricon

Biron, without asking the advice of his friends, hand overhead, as young men will have their vagaries, not having the fear of his father before his eyes, as I may fay, wilfully marries this Isabella.

Samp. How, wilfully! he should have had her confent, methinks.

Nurse. No, wilfully marries her; and which was worse, after she had settled all her fortune upon a nunnery, which she broke out of to run away with him. They say they had the church's forgiveness, but I had rather it had been his father's.

Samp. Why in good truth, 'thefe nunneries, I fee no good they do. I think the young lady was in the right to run away from a nunnery:' and I think our young mafter was not in the wrong but in marrying without a portion.

Nurse. That was the quarrel, I believe, Sampson: upon this, my old lord would never see him: disinherited him; took his younger brother, Carlos, into favour, whom he never car'd for before; and at last forc'd Biron to go to the stege of Candy, where he was killed.

Samp. Alack a-day, poor gentleman.

Nurse. For which my old lord hates her, as if she had been the cause of his going thither.

Samp Alas, alas, poor lady! The has fuffered for it;

the has liv'd a great while a widow.

Nurse. A great while indeed, for a young woman, Sampson.

Samp. Gad fo! here they come; I won't venture to be feen.

Enter Count Baldwin, followed by Ifabella and her Child. C. Bald, Whoever of your friends directed you,

Mifguided, and abus'd you - There's your way;

I can afford to shew you out again; What could you expect from me?

Isa. Oh, I have nothing to expect on earth!

But mifery is very apt to talk: I thought I might be heard.

C. Bald. What can you say?

Is there in eloquence, can there be in words

A recompensing pow'r, a remedy,

A reparation of the injuries,

The

Isa. I have undone myself too. C. Bald. Speak it again;

Say still you are undone; and I will hear you, With pleasure hear you.

Isa. Would my ruin please you? C. Bald. Beyond all other pleasures.

Isa. Then you are pleas'd—for I am most undone.

C. Bald. I pray'd but for revenge, and heav'n has And fent it to my wishes: these grey hairs [heard, Would have gone down in forrow to the grave, Which you have dug for me without the thought, The thought of leaving you more wretched here.

Isa. Indeed I am most wretched—' When I lost

. C. Bald. Would he had never been;

Or never had been yours.
 I/a. I then believ'd

· The measure of my forrow then was full:

But every moment of my growing days
Makes room for woes, and adds them to the fum.

I lost with Biron all the joys of life:
But now its last supporting means are gone,
All the kind helps that heav'n in pity rais'd,
In charitable pity to our wants,
At last have left us: now bereft of all,
But this last trial of a cruel father,
To save us both from finking. Oh, my child!
Kneel with me, knock at nature in his heart:
Let the resemblance of a once lov'd son
Speak in this little one, who never wrong'd you,
And plead the fatherless and widow's cause.
Oh, if you ever hope to be forgiven,
As you will need to be forgiven too,

Forget:our faults, that heaven may pardon yours!

C. Bald. How dare you mention heav'n! Call to mind Your perjur'd vows; your plighted, broken faith To heav'n, and all things holy; were you not Devoted, wedded to a life recluse,

The

The facred habit on, profess'd and fworn, A votary for ever? Can you think The facrilegious wretch, that robs the shrine, Is thunder proof?

Is a. There, there, began my woes.

Let women all take warning at my fate;

Never refolve, or think they can be fafe,

Within the reach and tongue of tempting men. Oh! had I never feen my Biron's face, Had he not tempted me, I had not fall'n, But fill continued innocent and free Of a bad world, which only he had pow'r

Debauch'd and' reconcil'd you to the world: He had no hand to bring you back again, But what you gave him. Circe, you prevail'd Upon his honest mind, transforming him From virtue, and himself, into what shapes You had occasion for; and what he did Was first inspir'd by you. 'A cloyster was

Too narrow for the work you had in hand;
Your business was more general; the whole world;
To be the scene: therefore you spread your charms.

To catch his foul, to be the infirument,

The wicked infirument of your curfed flight.
Not that you valued him; for any one, [come."
Who could have ferv'd the turn, had been as welIfa. Oh! I have fins to heav'n, but none to him.

C. Bald. Had my wretched fon Marry'd a beggar's bastard; taken her Out of her rags, and made her of my blood, The mischief might have ceas'd, and ended there. But bringing you into a family, Entails a curse upon the name, and house, That takes you in: the only part of me That did receive you, perish'd for his crime. 'Tis a desiance to offended heav'n Barely to pity you: your fins pursue you:

The heaviest judgments that can fall upon you,
Are your just lot, and but prepare your doom:

"How durst thou disobey me! To the Porter.

Is. Not for myself—for I am past the hopes
Of being heard—but for this innocent——

And then I never will disturb you more.

C. Bald. I almost pity the unhappy child:

But being yours

I/a. Look on him as your fon's;

And let his part in him answer for mine.

Oh, save, defend him, save him from the wrongs

That fall upon the poor!

C. Bald. It touches me

And I will fave him - But to keep him fafe;

Never come near him more.

I/a. What! take him from me!

No, we must never part: 'tis the last hold

Of comfort I have left; and when he fails,

All goes along with him: Oh! 'could you be

The tyrant to divorce life from my life?'

I live but in my child.

No, let me pray in vain, and beg my bread From door to door, to feed his daily wants,

Rather than always lose him. [your prayer. C. Bald Then have your child, and feed him with You, rascal, slave, what do I keep you for? How came this woman in?

Samp. Why indeed, my lord, I did as good as tell ther, before, my thoughts upon the matter—

C. Bald. Did you so, Sir? Now then tell her mine; Tell her I sent you to her. [Thruss him towards her. There's one more to provide for.

Samp. Good, my lord, what I did was in perfect obedience to the old nurse there. I told her what it would come to.

C. Bald. What! this was a plot upon me. And you too, beldam, were you in the conspiracy? Begone, go all together; 'I have provided you an equipage, now 'fet up when you please. She's old enough to do you 'fervice; I have none for her. The wide world lies before you: begone; 'take any road but this to beg or starve in—'I shall be glad to hear of you:' but never, never see me more—

[He drives 'em off before him.

I/a. Then Heav'n have mercy on me! [Exit with her Child, followed by Sampson and Nurse.

ACT II. SCENE continues.

Enter Villeroy and Carlos, meeting.

Vil. MY friend, I fear to alk—but Isabella—The lovely widow's tears, her orphan's cries,
Thy father must feel for them—No, I read,
I read their cold reception in thine eyes—
Thou pitiest them—tho' Baldwin—but I spare him
For Carlos' sake; thou art no son of his.
There needs not this to endear thee more to me. [embrace.

Car. My Villeroy, the fatherless, the widow, Are terms not understood within these gates—You must forgive him; Sir, he thinks this woman Is Biron's fate, that hurried him to death—I must not think on't, lest my friendship stagger. My friend's, my fister's mutual advantage Have reconcil'd my bosom to its task.

Vil. Advantage! think not I intend to raise
An interest from Isabella's wrongs.
Your father may have interested ends
In her undoing; but my heart has none;

Her happiness must be my interest, And that I would restore.

Car. Why fo I mean.

These hardships that my father lays upon her,
I'm forry for; and wish I could prevent;
But he will have his way.

Since there's no hope from her prosperity, her change of fortune may alter the condition of her thoughts, and make for you.

Vil. She is above her fortune.

Car. Try her again. Women commonly love according to the circumftances they are in.

Vil. Common women may.

' Car. Since you are not acceffary to the injustice, you may be persuaded to take the advantage of other people's crimes.

'Vil. I must despise all those advantages,
That indirectly can advance my love.'
No, though I live but in the hopes of her,
And languish for th' enjoyment of those hopes;

I'd

I'd rather pine in a confuming want
Of what I wish, than have the blessing mine,
From any reason but confending love.
Oh! let me never have it to remember,
I could betray her coldly to comply:
When a clear gen'rous choice bestows her on me,
I know to value the unequal'd gift:
I would not have it, but to value it.

Car. Take your own way; remember what I offer'd came from a friend.

Vil. I understand it fo. I'll ferve her for herself, without the thought of a reward. [Exit.

I must keep up appearances with her too. [Exit. SCENE, Isabella and Nurse; Isabella's Son at play.

Isa. Sooner, or later, all things pass away,

And are no more. The beggar and the king,
With equal fleps, tread forward to their end:
The reconciling grave swallows distinction first, that made us foes.

Though they appear of different natures now,

They meet at last;'
Then all alike lie down in peace together.
When will that hour of peace arrive for me!
In heav'n I shall find it—not in heav'n,
If my old tyrant father can dispose
Of things above—but, there, his interest
May be as poor as mine, and want a friend
As much as I do here.

As much as I do here.

Nurse. Good madam, be comforted.

Isa. Do I deserve to be this out-cast wretch;
Abandon'd thus, and lost? But 'tis my lot,
The will of heav'n, and I must not complain;
I will not for myself: let me bear all
The violence of your wrath; but spare my child:
Let not my sins be visited on him:
They are; they must; a general ruin falls
On every thing about me: thou art lost,
Poor nurse, by being near me.

Nurse

Nurse. I can work, or beg, to do you service.

Ifa. Could I forget.

What I have been, I might the better bear.

What I am destin'd to: I'm not the first.

That have been wretched: but to think how much I have been happier!—Wild hurrying thoughts.

Start every way from my distracted foul,

To find out hope, and only meet despair.

What answer have I?

Enter Sampson.

Samp. Why truly, very little to the purpose: like a Jew as he is, he says you have had more already than the jewels a e worth: he wishes you would rather think of redeeming 'em, than expect any more money upon 'em.

[Exit Sampson.

Ifa. 'Tis very well— So:-Poverty at home, and debts abroad! My present fortune bad; my hopes yet worse! What will become of me! This ring is all I have left of value now: 'Twas given me by my husband; his first gift Upon our marriage: I've always kept it; With my best care, the treasure next my life: And now but part with it to support life, Which only can be dearer. Take it, nurse, 'Twill stop the cries of hunger for a time. · Provide us bread, and bring a short reprieve, · To put off the bad day of beggary, That will come on too foon. Take care of it: Manage it as the last remaining friend That would relieve us. [Exit Nurse.] Heav'n can only Where we shall find another ---- My dear boy! The labour of his birth was lighter to me Than of my fondness now; my fears for him Are more, than in that hour of hovering death, They could be for myfelf——He minds me not, His little sports have taken up his thoughts: Oh, may they never feel the pangs of mine. Thinking will make me mad: why must I think, When no thought brings me comfort? Nurse returns done; your creditors of all kinds are come in upon you: they have mustered up a regiment of rogues, that are come to plunder your house, and seize upon all you have in the world: they are below. What will you do, Madam?

Nurse. Oh, Madam! you are utterly ruin'd and undone;

IJa. Do! nothing; no, for I am born to suffer.

Enter Carlos to her.

Car. Oh, fister! can I call you by that name, And be the son of this inhuman man, Inveterate to your ruin? Do not think I am a-kin to his barbarity: I must abhor my father's usage of you; And from my bleeding honest heart must pity, Pity your lost condition. Can you think Of any way that I may serve you in? But what enrages most my sense of grief, My forrow for your wrongs, is, that my father, Fore knowing well the storm that was to fall, Has order'd me not to appear for you.

I/a. I thank your pity; my poor husband fell

For disobeying him, do not you stay

To venture his displeasure too for me.

Car. You must resolve on something

Car. You must refolve on fomething— [Exit.]
Ifa. Let my fate

Determine for me; I shall be prepar'd,
The worst that can befal me, is to die:

[A noi]

When once it comes to that, it matters not Which way 'tis brought about: whether I starve,

Or hang, or drown, the end is still the same;
Plagues, poison, famine, are but several names

Of the fame thing, and all conclude in death.

But sudden death! Oh, for a sudden death,
To cheat my persecutors of their hopes,

Th' expected pleasure of beholding me Long in my pains, ling'ring in misery.

It will not be, that is deny d me too.'
Hark, they are coming; let the torrent roar:
It can but overwhelm me in its fall;

And life and death are now alike to me.

[Exeunt, the Nurse leading the Child.

You have my word for this: I'll see you paid.

the money, no matter whence it comes.

Vil. To-morrow you shall have it.

Car. Thus far all's well-

Enter Isabella, and Nurse with the Child.

And now my filter comes to crown the work. [Afide. I/a. Where are the raving blood-hounds, that purfue In a full cry, gaping to fwallow me? I meet your rage, and come to be devour'd;

Say, which way are you to dispose of me! To dungeons, darkness, death!

Car. Have patience.

Isa. Patience!

Off. You'll excuse us, we are but in our office: Debts must be paid.

Isa. My death will pay you all. [Distractedly. Off While there is law to be had, people will have their own.

Vil. 'Tis very fit they should; but pray be gone.

To-morrow certainly—

[Exeunt Officers.

Ifa. What of to-morrow?
Am I then the sport,

The game of fortune, and her laughing foole?

The common spectacle, to be expos'd
From day to day, and baited for the mirth
Of the lewd rabble? Must I be referv'd

For fresh afflictions?

Vil. For long happiness Of life, I hope.

I/a. There is no hope for me.

The load grows light, when we refolve to bear:

I'm ready for my trial.

Car. Pray be calm,

And know your friends.

Ifa. My friends! Have I a friend?

Car. A faithful friend; in your extremest need, Villeroy came in to fave you—

Vil. Let me be understood,

And then condemn me: you have given me leave To be your friend; and in that only name I now appear before you. I could wish There had been no occasion of a friend, Because I know you hate to be oblig'd; And still more loth to be oblig'd by me. [Afide.

Isa. 'Twas that I would avoid-

Vil. I'm most unhappy that my services Can be suspected to design upon you; I have no farther ends than to redeem you From fortune's wrongs; to shew myself at last, What I have long profess'd to be, your friend: Allow me that; and to convince you more, That I intend only your interest, Forgive what I have done, and in amends (If that can make you any, that can please you) I'll tear myself for ever from my hopes, Stifle this flaming passion in my foul, 'That has fo long broke out to trouble you,' And mention my unlucky love no more.

I/a. This generofity will ruin me. Vil. Nay, if the bleffing of my looking on you

Disturbs your peace, I will do all I can To keep away, and never fee you more.

Car. You must not go. Vil. Could Ifabella speak

Those few short words, I should be rooted here, And never move but upon her commands.

Car. Speak to him, fifter; do not throw away A fortune that invites you to be happy. In your extremity he begs your love; And has deferv'd it nobly. Think upon Your lost condition, helpless and alone. Tho' now you have a friend, the time must come That you will want one; him you may fecure To be a friend, a father, a husband to you. Isa. A husband!

Car. You have discharg'd your duty to the dead, And to the living; 'tis a wilfulness

Note

Not to give way to your necessities, That force you to this marriage.

Nur. What must become of this poor innocence?

Car. He wants a father to protect his youth, And rear him up to virtue: you must bear The future blame, and answer to the world, When you refuse the easy honest means Of taking care of him.

Nur. Of him and me,

And every one that must depend upon you:

" Unless you please now to provide for us,
" We must all perish."

Car. Nor would I press you

I/a. Do not think I need
Your reasons, to confirm my gratitude;
I have a soul that's truly sensible
Of your great worth, and busy to contrive, [To Vil.

If possible, to make you a return. Vil. Oh, easily possible!

I/a. It cannot be your way: my pleafures are Bury'd, and cold in my dead husband's grave;
And I should wrong the truth, myself, and you,
To fay that I can ever love again.
I owe this declaration to myself:
But as a proof that I owe all to you,
If after what I have said, you can resolve
To think me worth your love—Where am I going?
You cannot think it; 'tis impossible.

Vil. Impossible!

1/a. You should not ask me now, nor should I grant;
I am so much oblig'd, that to consent
Wou'd want a name to recommend the gift:
"Twou'd shew me poor, indebted, and compell'd,

Defigning, mercenary: and I know You would not wish to think I could be bought.

Vol. Be bought! where is the price that can pretend To bargain for you? Not in fortune's power. The joys of Heav'n, and love, must be bestow'd; They are not to be fold, and cannot be deserv'd.

Since you consent to hear me, hear me now;
That you may grant: you are above
The little forms which circumfcribe your sex;
We differ but in time, let that be mine.

Ifa. You think fit
To get the better of me, and you shall;
Since you will have it so—I will be yours.
Vil. I take you at your word.

I/a. I give you all, My hand; and would I had a heart to give: But if it ever can return again, 'Tis wholly yours.

Vil. Oh, ecstacy of joy!

Leave that to me. If all my fervices,

If prosperous days, and kind indulging nights;

If all that man can fondly say or do,

Can beget love, love shall be born again.

Oh, Carlos! now my friend, and brother too:

And, nurse, I have eternal thanks for thee.

Send for the priest—

This night you must be mine.

Let me command in this, and all my life

Shall be departed to you.

Shall be devoted to you.

Isa. On your word,

Never to press me to put off these weeds,

Which best become my melancholy thoughts,

You shall command me.

Vil. Witness, Heaven and earth
Against my foul, when I do any thing
To give you a disquiet.

Car. I long to wish you joy.

Vil. You'll be a witness of my happiness?

Car For once I'll be my sister's father,

And give her to you.

Vil. Next, my Isabella, Be near my heart: I am for ever yours.

[Exeunt.

ACT-III. SCENE, Count Baldwin's House.

Enter Count Baldwin and Carlos.

C. Bald. MARRIED to Villeroy, fay'ft thou?

Car. Yes, my lord.

Last night the priest perform'd his holy office,

And made 'em one.

C. Bald.

C. Bald. Misfortune join 'em!
And may her violated vows pull down
A lasting curse, a constancy of forrow
On both their heads—' I have not yet forgot
Thy slighted passion, the resus'd alliance;
But having her, we are reveng'd at full.
Heav'n will pursue her still, and Villeroy
Share the judgments she calls down.'

Car. Soon he'll hate her;
Tho' warm and violent in his raptures now;
When full enjoyment palls his ficken'd fense,
And reason with satiety returns,
Her cold constrain'd acceptance of his hand
Will gall his pride, which tho' of late o'erpower'd
By stronger passions) will, as they grow weak,
Rise in full force, and pour its vengeance on her.

C. Bald. Now, Carlos, take example to thy aid; Let Biron's difobedience, and the curfe He took into his bosom, prove a warning, A monitor to thee, to keep thy duty Firm and unshaken.

Car. May those rankling wounds Which Biron's disobedience gave my father, Be heal'd by me

C. Bald. With tears I thank thee, Carlos—And may'ft thou ever feel those inward joys,
Thy duty gives thy father—but, my fon,
We must not let resentment choak our justice;
'Tis fit that Villeroy know he has no claim
From me, in right of Isabella—Biron,
(Whose name brings tears) when wedded to this woBy me abandon'd, sunk the little fortune
His uncle lest, in vanity, and sondness:
I am possent of those your brother's papers,
Which now are Villeroy's, and shou'd aught remain,
In justice it is his; from me to him
You shall convey them—follow me, and take 'em.

[Exit C. Baldwins Car. Yes, I will take 'em; but e'er I part with 'em, I will be fure my interest will not fuffer. By these his high, refin'd, fantastic notions. Of equity and right—What a paradox

Is man! My father here, who boasts his honour, And even but now was warm in praise of justice, Can steel his heart against the widow's tears, And infant's wants; the widow and the infant Of Biron; of his fon, his fav'rite fon. 'Tis ever thus weak minds, who court opinion, And, dead to virtuous feeling, hide their wants In pompous affectation-Now to Villeroy-E'er this his friends, for he is much belov'd, Croud to his house, and with their nuptial fongs Awake the wedded pair: I'll join the thiong, And in my face, at least, bear joy and friendship. [Exits SCENE, a Ball in Villeroy's House. A Band of Music, with the Friends of Villeroy. Enter a Servant.

1/2 Fr. Where's your master, my good friend?

Ser. Within, Sir,

Preparing for the welcome of his friends. 1A Fr. Acquaint him we are here: yet flay, The voice of music gently shall surprise him, And breathe our falutations to his ear. Strike up the strain to Villeroy's happiness, To Isabella's - But he's here already.

Enter Villeroy. Vil. My friends, let me embrace you:

Welcome all-What means this preparation?

Seeing the Musti. of Fr. A flight token Of our best wishes for your growing happiness

You must permit our friendship-

Vil. You oblige me-1/1 Fr. But your lovely bride, That wonder of her fex, she must appear,

And add new brightness to this happy morning. Vil. She is not yet prepar'd; and let her will, My worthiest friend, determine her behaviour; To win, and not to force her disposition, Has been my seven years task. She will anon, Speak welcome to you all. The music stays.

Hail, happy pair, thus in each other bleft;
Be ever free from care, of ev'ry joy posses'd!

Vil. I thank you for the proof of your affection:
I am so much transported with the thoughts
Of what I am, I know not what I do.
My Isabella!—but possessing her,

Who wou'd not lose himself?—You'll pardon me—Oh! there was nothing wanting to my soul,
But the kind wishes of my loving friends—
But our collation waits; where's Carlos now?
Methinks I am but half myself, without him.

2d Fr. This is wonderful! Married a night and a day, and yet in raptures.

Vil. Oh! when you all get wives, and fuch as mine, (If fuch another woman can be found)
You will rave too, doat on the dear content,
And prattle in their praife out of all bounds.

I cannot fpeak my blifs! 'Tis in my head,

Tis in my heart, and takes up all my foul—
The labour of my fancy. You'll pardon me;

About fome twelve months hence I may begin To speak plain sense—Walk in, and honour me."

Enter Isabella.

My Isabella! Oh, the joy of my heart,
That I have leave at last to call you mine!

When I give up that title to the charms
Of any other wish, be nothing mine:
But let me look upon you, view you well.
This is a welcome gallantry indeed!
I durst not ask, but it was kind to grant,
Just at this time: dispensing with your dress.
Upon this second day to greet our friends.

Isa, Black might be ominous;

I would not bring ill luck along with me.

Vil. Oh! if your melancholy thoughts could change

With shifting of your drefs—Time has done cures Incredible this way, and may again.

1/a. I could have wish'd, if you had thought it fit,

Our marriage had not been fo public.

Vil. Do not you grudge me my excess of love;
That was a cause it could not be conceal'd:
Besides, 'twould injure the opinion
I have of my good fortune, having you;
And lessen it in other peoples thoughts.

Busy on such occasions to enquire,

" Had it been private."

Ifa. I have no more to fay.

Enter Carlos.

Vil. My Carlos too, who came in to the support Of our bad fortune, has an honest right, In better times, to share the good with us.

Car. I come to claim that right, to share your joy;

To wish you joy; and find it in myself;

For a friend's happiness reslects a warmth,
A kindly comfort, into every heart

That is not envious.

Vil. ' He must be a friend,

Who is not envious of a happiness
So absolute as mine; but if you are,

(As I have reason to believe you are)

Concern'd for my well-being, there's the cause;
Thank her for what I am, and what must be.

[Music flourists.

I fee you mean a fecond entertainment.
My dearest Isabella, you must hear
The raptures of my friends; from thee they spring;
Thy virtues have diffus'd themselves around,
And made them all as happy as myself.

Isa. I feel their favours with a grateful heart,

And willingly comply.

RECITATIVE.
Take the gifts the gods intend ye:
Grateful meet the proffer'd joy;
Truth and honour shall attend ye;
Charms that ne'er can change or cloy.

Man. Oh, the raptures of possessing, Taking beauty to thy arms!

Wom.

Woman. Oh the joy, the lasting blessing, When with virtue beauty charms!

Man. Purer flames shall gently warm ye; Woman. Love and honour both shall charm thee.

Both. Oh the raptures of, &c. &c.

CHORUS.

Far from hence be care and strife, Far, the pang that tortures life: May the circling minutes prove One sweet round of peace and love!

Car. 'Tis fine, indeed!

You'll take my advice another time, fifter.

Vil. What have you done? A rifing finile
Stole from her thoughts, just redd'ning on her cheek,
And you have dash'd it.

Car. I'm forry for't.

Vil. My friends, you will forgive, when I own, I must prefer her peace to all the world? Come, Isabella, let us lead the way:
Within we'll speak our welcome to our friends,
And crown the happy festival with joy. [Exeunt.

SCENE, a Room. Enter Sampson and Nurse.

Samp. Ay, marry nurse, here's a master indeed! He'll double our wages for us! If he comes on as fast with my lady, as he does with his servants, we are all in the way to be well pleased.

Nurse. He's in a rare humour; if she be in as good

Samp. If the be, marry, we may e'en fay, they have begot it upon one another.

Nurse. Well; why don't you go back again to your old count? You thought your threat cut, I warrant you, to be turn'd out of a nobleman's fervice.

Samp. For the future, I will never ferve in a house, where the master or mittress of it lie single: they are out of humour with every body when they are not pleased themselves. Now, this matrimony makes every thing go well. There's mirth and money stirring about, when those matters go as they should do.

Nurse. Odfo, my master! we must not be seen. [Exit. Enter Villeroy with a letter, and Isabella.

Vil. I must away this moment—fee his letter, Sign'd by himself: alas! he could no more; My brother's desperate, and cannot die In peace, but in my arms.

Isa. So suddenly!

Vil. Suddenly taken, on the road to Brussels, To do us honour, love; unfortunate! Thus to be torn from thee, and all those charms, Tho' cold to me and dead.

Isa. I'm forry for the cause. Vil. Oh! could I think.

Could I persuade myself that your concern
For me, or for my absence, were the spring,
The fountain of these melancholy thoughts,
My heart would dance, spite of the sad occasion,
And be a gay companion in my journey;

Enter Catlos from Supper.

My good Carlos, why have you left my friends?

Car. They are departed home.

They faw fome fudden melancholy news

Had ftolen the lively colour from your cheek—

You had withdrawn, the bride, alarm'd, had follow'd:

Mere ceremony had been conftraint; and this

Good-natur'd rudeness
Vil. Was the more obliging.

There, Carlos, is the cause. [Gives the letter.

Car. Un'ucky accident!
Th' archbishop of Malines, your worthy brother
With him to-night! Sister, will you permit it?

Vil. It must be so.

Isa. You hear it must be so.

Vil. Oh, that it must!

Vil. But having the possession of my love,

I am the better able to support

My absence, in the hopes of my return.

Car. Your stay will be but short?

Vil. It will feem long!

The longer that my lfabella fighs:

I shall be jealous of this rival, grief,
That you indulge and fondle in my absence.

It takes fo full possession of thy heart,
There is not room enough for mighty love.

My horses wait: farewel, my love! You, Carlos, Will act a brother's part, 'till I return, And be the guardian here. All, all I have That's dear to me, I give up to your care.

Car. And I receive her as a friend and brother.

Vil. Nay, stir not, love! for the night air is cold,
And the dews fall—Here be our end of parting;
Carlos will see me to my horse.

(Exit with Carlos

Lifa. Oh, may thy brother better all thy hopes! Adieu.

A fudden melancholy bakes my blood!
Forgive me, Villeroy——I do not find
That cheerful gratitude thy fervice asks:

Yet, if I know my heart, and fure I do,
'Tis not averse from honest obligation.

'I'll to my chamber, and to-bed; my mind,

My harrafs'd mind, is weary.'

[Exit.

ACT IV. SCENE, The Street.

Enter Biron and Belford, just arriv'd.

Bir. THE longest day will have an end; we are got home at last.

Bel. We have got our legs at liberty; and liberty is home, where'er we go; though mine lies most in England.

Bir. Pray let me call this yours: for what I can command in Brussels, you shall find your own. I have a father here, who, perhaps, after seven years absence, and costing him nothing in my travels, may be glad to see me. You know my story—How does my disguise become me?

Bel. Just as you would have it; 'tis natural, and will conceal you.

Bir. To morrow you shall be fure to find me here, as early as you please. This is the house, you have out threet. Bel.

Bel. I watrant you: I han't many visits to make before I come to you.

Bir. To night I have some affairs, that will oblige me to be private.

Bel. A good bed is the privatest affair that I desire to be engaged in to night; your directions will carry me to my lodgings.

[Exit.

Bir. Good night, my friend. [Knocks.]

The long expected moment is arriv'd!

And if all here is well, my past forrows

Will only heighten my excess of joy;

And nothing will remain to with or har

And nothing will remain to wish or hope for!

[Knocks again.

Enter Sampson.

Sam. Who's there? What would you have?

Bir. Is your lady at home, friend?

Sam. Why, truly friend, it is my employment to answer impertinent questions: but for my lady's being at home, or no, that's just as my lady pleases.

Bir. But how shall I know, whether it pleases her or no?

Sam. Why, if you'll take my word for it, you may carry your errand back again: the never pleases to see any body at this time of night, that she does not know; and by your dress and appearance, I am sure, you must be a stranger to her.

Bir. But I have business; and you don't know how that may please her.

Sam. Nay, if you have business, she is the best judge whether your business will please her or no: therefore I, will proceed in my office, and know of my lady, whether or no she is pleas'd to be at home or no— [Going.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Who's that you are so busy withal? Methinks you might have found out an answer in sewer words; but, Sampson, you love to hear yourself prate sometimes, as well as your betters, that I must say for you. Let me come to him. Who would you speak with, stranger?

Bir. With you, mistress, if you could help me to speak to your lady.

Nusse. Yes, Sir, I can help you in a civil way: but can nobody do your business but my lady?

C 2

Biro

Bir. Not fo well; but if you carry her this ring, the'll know my business better.

Nurse. There's no love-letter in it, I hope; you look like a civil gentleman. In an honest way, I may bring you an answer.

Bir. My old nurse, only a little older! 'They say the tongue grows always: mercy on me! then her's is seven years longer, since I lest her.' Yet there is something in these servants' folly pleases me: the cautious conduct of the samily appears, and speaks in their impertinence. Well, mistress—

Nurse returns.

Nurse. I have deliver'd your ring, Sir! pray heav'n, you bring no bad news along with you.

Bir. Quite contrary, I hope.

Nurse. Nay, I hope so too; but my lady was very much surpris'd when I gave it her. Sir, I am but a servant, as a body may say; but if you'll walk in, that I may shut the doors, for we keep very orderly hours, I can show you into the parlour, and help you to an answer, perhaps as soon as those that are wifer. [Exit.

Bir. I'll follow you—
Now all my fpirits hurry to my heart,
And every fense has taken the alarm
At this approaching interview!

Heav'ns! how I tremble! [Exit into the house. SCENE, a Chamber.

Enter Isabella.

Is and charms. That have made nature flart from her old course:
The fun has been eclips'd, the moon drawn down
From her career, still paler, and subdu'd
To the abuses of this under world!
Now I believe all pessible. This ring,
This little ring, with necromantic force,
Has rais'd the ghost of pleasure to my fears;
Conjur'd the sense of honour, and of love,
Into such shapes, they fright me from myself!
I dare not think of them—

I'll call you when I want you.' [Servant goes out. Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Madam, the gentleman's below.

1/a. I had forgot, pray let me speak with him;

Bir. Have you forgot me quite?

Isa. Forgot you!

Bir. Then farewel my disguise, and my misfortunes.

My Isabella!
[He goes to her; she shrieks, and falls into a swoon.

Isa. Ha!

Bir. Oh! come again:

Thy Biron summons thee to life and love;
Once I had charms to wake thee;
Thy once lov'd, ever-loving husband calls

Thy Biron speaks to thee.

Isa. My husband! Biron?

Bir. Excess of love and joy, for my return,
Has overpower'd her——I was to blame
To take thy fex's foftness unprepar'd:
But finking thus, thus dying in my arms,
This ecstacy has made my welcome more
Than words could fay: words may be counterfeit,
False-coin'd, and current only from the tongue,
Without the mind; but passion's in the foul,
And always speaks the heart.

And always speaks the heart.

I know his voice: my life upon the wing,
Hears the fost lute that brings me back again;

'Tis he himself, my Biron, the dear man!
My true-lov'd husband! Do I hold you sast,
Never to part again? 'Can I believe it?'

Nothing but you could work so great a change,

'There's more than life itself in dying here.'
If I must fall, death's welcome in these arms.

Bir. Is this my welcome home! This the reward of all my miferies. long labours, pains, And pining wants of wretched flavery, Which I've outliv'd, only in hopes of thee, Am I thus paid at last for deathless love:

And call'd the cause of thy misfortunes now?

If a. Enquire no more; 'twill be explain'd too foon, She's going off.

Bir. What? Canst thou leave me too? [He flays her.

For both our fakes, permit me—

Bir. Rack me not with imaginations
Of things impossible—Thou can'st not mean
What thou halt faid—Yet fomething she must mean.

'Twas madness all—Compose thyself, my love!
The fit is past; all may be well again:
Let us to bed.

1/a. 'To bed! You've rais'd the ftorm
Will fever us for ever: oh, Biron!
While I have life, still I must call you mine:
I know I am, and always was, unworthy.

To be the happy partner of your love;
And now must never, never share it more.

But oh! if ever I was dear to you,

As fometimes you have thoughs me,' on my knees, (The last time I shall care to be believ'd)
I beg you, beg to think me innocent,,
Clear of all crimes, that thus can banish me
From this world's comforts in my losing you.

· Bir.

· Bir. Where will this end?'

1/a. * The rugged hand of fate has got between * Our meeting hearts, and thrusts them from their joys." Since we must part—

Bir. Nothing shall ever part us.

'Ija. Parting's the least that is fet down for me:
Heaven has decreed, and we must suffer all.

Bir. I know thee innocent: I know myfelf fo:

Indeed we both have been unfortunate;

But fure misfortunes ne'er were faults in love.'

1/a. Oh! there's a fatal ftory to be told:

Be deaf to that, as heaven has been to me!

And rot the tongue that shall reveal my shame: When thou shalt hear how much thou hast been wrong'd, How wilt thou curse thy fond believing heart, Tear me from the warm bosom of thy love, And throw me like a poisonous wood one.

And throw me like a poisonous weed away:
Can I bear that? Bear to be curit and torn,

And thrown out of thy family and name,
Like a difease? Can I bear this from thee?

"I never can:' No, all things have their end.
When I am dead, forgive and pity me. [Exit.

Bir. Stay, my Ifabella—
What can the mean? These doubtings will distract me:
Some hidden mischief soon will burit to light;
I cannot bear it—I must be fatissized—
'Tis she, my wise, must clear this darkness to me.

She shall—if the sad tale at last must come!

She is my fate, and best can speak my doom. [Exit.

ACT V. Enter Biron, Nurse following bim.

Bir. I KNOW enough: th' important question
Of life or death, fearful to be resolv'd,
Is clear'd to me: I see where it must end;
And need enquire no more—Pray, let me have
Pen, ink and paper; I must write a while,
And then I'll try to rest—to rest for ever! [Exit Nurse.
Poor Habella! now I know the cause,
The cause of thy distress, and cannot wonder
That it has turn'd thy brain. If I look back
Upon thy loss, it will distract me too.
Oh, any curse but this might be remov'd!

But

But 'twas the rancorous malignity Of all ill stars combin'd, of heav'n and fate-Hold, hold my impious tongue-Alas! I rave: Why do I tax the stars, or heav'n, or fate? They are all innocent of driving us Into despair: they have not urg'd my doom; My father and my brother are my fates, That drive me to my ruin. They knew well I was alive. Too well they knew how dear My Ifabella Oh, my wife no more! How dear her love was to me-Yet they flood, With a malicious filent joy, flood by, And faw her give up all my happinefs, The treasure of her beauty to another; " Stood by, and faw her marry'd to another:" Oh, cruel father! and unnatural brother! " Shall I not tell you that you have undone me?" I have but to accuse you of my wrongs, And then to fall forgotten - Sleep or death Sits heavy on me, and benumbs my pains: Either is welcome; but the hand of death Works always fure, and belt can close my eyes.

[Exit Biron.

Enter Nurse and Sampson.

Nurse. Here's strange things towards, Sampson: what will be the end of 'em, do you think?

Samp. Nay, marry, nurse, I can't see so far; but the law, I believe, is on Biron, the first husband's side.

Nurse. Yes; no question, he has the law on his fide. Samp. For I have heard, the law fays, a woman must be a widow, all out seven years, before she can marry again, according to law.

Nurse. Ay, so it does; and our lady has not been a widow altogether seven years.

Samp. Why then, nurse, mark my words, and say I told you so: the man must have his wife again, and all will do well.

Nurse. But if our master Villeroy comes back again — Samp. Why, if he does, he is not the first man that has had his wife taken from him.

Nurse For fear of the worst, will you go to the old count, desire him to come as soon as he can; there may be mischief, and he is able to prevent it.

Sampo

n

Samp. Now you fay fomething; now I take you, surfe; that will do well, indeed; mischief should be prevented, a little thing will make a quarrel, when there's a woman in the way. I'll about it instantly.—
[Execute.]

SCENE draws, shews Biron asteep on a Couch.

Enter Habella.

Isa. Asleep so foon! Oh, happy! happy thou, Who thus can fleep! I never shall fleep more-If then to fleep be to be happy, he Who sleeps the longest, is the happiest; Death is the longest sleep-Oh, have a care! Mischief will thrive apace. Never wake more. [To Bir. If thou did'st ever love thy Isabella, To-morrow must be doomsday to thy peace. The fight of him difarms ev'n death itself. - The starting transport of new quick'ning life Gives just such hopes; and pleasure grows again With looking on him -Let me look my last-But is a look enough for parting love! Sure I may take a kifs-Where am I going ! Help, help me, Villeroy!-Mountains and feas Divide your love, never to meet my shame.

[Throws herself upon the floor; after a short pause, she raises herself upon her elbow.

What will this battle of the brain do with me!
This little ball, this ravag'd province, long
Cannot maintain—The globe of earth wants room
And food for fuch a war—I find I'm going—
Famine, plagues, and flames,
Wide walte and defolation, do your work
Upon the world, and then devour yourfelves.

The scene shifts fast [She rifes.] and now 'tis better with me;

Considing passions have at last unhing'd

Conflicting passions have at last unhing'd The great machine! the foul itself feems chang'd! Oh, 'tis a happy revolution here!

The reas'ning faculties are all depos'd;

Judgment, and understanding, common fense,

Driv'n out as traitors to the public peace.
Now I'm reveng'd upon my memory,

Her feat dug up, where all the images
Of a long mif-spent life, were rising still,

& To

· To glare a fad reflection of my crimes,

And flab a conscience thro' em! You are safe,

You monitors of mischief! What a change!
Better and better still! This is the infant state

· Of innocence, before the birth of care.

My thoughts are fmooth as the Elysian plains,
Without a rub: the drowfy falling streams

· Invite me to their flumbers.

Would I were landed there'— [Sinks into a chair. What noise was that! A knocking at the gate! It may be Villeroy— No matter who.

Bir. Come, Isabella, come,

Ifa. Hark! I'm call'd!

Bir. You flay too long from me. [there? I/a, A man's voice! in my bed! How came he Nothing but villainy in this bad world; [Rifes. Coveting neighbours goods, or neighbours wives.' Here's physic for your fever.

[Draws a dagger, and goes backward to the couch.

Breathing a vein is the old remedy.'

If husbands go to heav'n,

Where do they go that fend 'em? - This to thy - [Just going to stab him, he rises, she knows him, and shrieks. What do I fee!

Bir. Ifabella, arm'd!

Isa. Against my husband's life!

Who, but the wretch, most reprobate to grace,

Despair e'er harden'd for damnation,

* Could think of fuch a deed—Murder my husband?"

Bir. Thou did'th not think it.

Isa. Madness has brought me to the gates of hell, And there has left me. Oh, the frightful change

· Of my distractions! Or is this interval · Of reason but to aggravate my woes,

To drive the horror back with greater force

· Upon my foul, and fix me mad for ever?"

Bir. Why dost thou fly me so?

I/a. I cannot bear his fight; distraction, come, Possess me all, and take me to thy thyself! Shake off thy chains, and hasten to my aid;—
'I hou art my only cure—' Like other friends,

· He will not come to my necessities;

. Then I must go to find the tyrant out;

" Whic

[Exit.

[Running out. Which is the nearest way?' Bir. Poor Isabella, she's not in a condition To give me any comfort, if the could: Loft to herfelf-as quickly I shall be To all the world-Horrors come fast around me; My mind is overcast-the gath'ring clouds Darken the prospect-I approach the brink, And foon must leap the precipice! Oh! Heav'n! While yet my fenfes are my own, thus kneeling, Let me implore thy mercies on my wife: Release her from her pangs; and if my reason, O'erwhelm'd with miferies, fink before the tempest. Pardon those crimes despair may bring upon me. [Rises. Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Sir, there's fomebody at the door must needs fpeak with you; he won't tell his name.

Bir. I come to him. Exit Nurse. 'Tis Belford I suppose; he little knows Of what has happen'd here; I wanted him, Must employ his friendship, and then-

SCENE, The Street. Enter Carlos with three Ruffians.

Car. A younger brother! I was one too long Not to prevent my being fo again. We must be fudden. Younger brothers are But lawful baffards of another name, Thrult out of their nobility of birth And family, and tainted into trades. Shall I be one of them - Bow, and retire. To make more room for the unweildy heir To play the fool in; No--Eur how shall I prevent it? - Biron comes To take possession of my father's love-Would that were all; there's a birth right too That he will feize. Besides, if Biron lives, He will unfold some practices, which I Cannot well answer-therefore he shall die; This night must be dispos'd of: I have means That will not fail my purpose. - Here he comes. Enter Biron.

Bir., Ha! am I beset? I live but to revenge me. [They surround him, fighting; Villeroy enters with two Servants; they rescue bim; Carlos and his party fly. D 2

Vil. How are you, Sir? Mortally hurt, I fear. Take care, and lead him in.

Bir. I thank you for the goodness, Sir; tho' 'tis Bestow'd upon a very wretch; and death, Tho' from a villain's hand, had been to me An act of kindness, and the height of mercy—But I thank you, Sir.

[He is led in.

SCENE, the Inside of the House.

Enter Isabella.

I/a. Murder my husband! Oh! I must not dare To think of living on; my desperate hand In a mad rage may offer it again:
Stab me any where but there. Here's room enough In my own breast, to act the fury in,
The proper scene of mischief. 'Villeroy comes;

Villeroy and Biron come! Oh! hide me from 'em They rack, they tear; let 'em carve out my limbs,

Divide my body to their equal claims!
My foul is only Biron's; that is free,

And thus I strike for him and liberty.'
[Going to stab berfelf, Villeroy runs in and prevents her, by taking the dagger from her.

Vil. Angels defend and fave thee!

Attempt thy precious life! 'the treafury

Of nature's fweets! life of my little world;

Lay violent hands upon thy innocent felf!

Use Is a minnocent, and I'll believe you.

What would you have with me? Pray let me go.

Are you there, Sir? You are the very man Have done all this. — You would have made Me believe you married me; but the fool

Was wifer I thank you: 'tis not all gospel You men preach upon that subject.

Vil. Dost thou not know me, love?

Ija. O yes, very well.

You are the widow's comforter; that marries

Any woman when her husband's out of the way:
But I'll never, never take your word again.

Vil. 'I am thy loving husband.' "Tis Villeroy, thy busband.

Isa. I have none; no husband— [Weeping. Never had but one, and he dy'd at Candy.

Did he not? I am fure you told me fo; you,

· Or

· Or fomebody with just fuch a lying look,

As you have now.' Speak, did he not die there? Vil. He did, my life.

Isa. But swear it, quickly swear,

Biron enters bloody, and leaning upon his found.

Before that screaming evidence appears,

In bloody proof against me-(She feeing Biron swoons into a chair, Vil. helps her. Vil. Help there! Nurse, where are you?

Ha! I am distracted too! Going to call for help, fees Bir.

Biron alive!

Bir. The only wretch on earth that must not live. Vil. Biron or Villeroy must not, that's decreed.

Bir. You've fav'd me from the hands of murderers: Would you had not, for life's my greatest plague-And then, of all the world, you are the man

I would not be oblig'd to-Ifabella! I came to fall before thee: I had dy'd

Happy not to have found your Villeroy here:

Killes ber A long farewel, and a last parting kifs. Vil. A kifs! confusion! it must be your last. [Draws. Bir. I know it must-Here I give up that death

You but delay'd: fince what is past has been The work of fate, thus we must finish it. [Faints.

Thrust home, be fure.

Vil. Alas! he faints! fome help there.

Bir. 'Tis all in vain, my forrows foon will end-Oh, Villeroy! let a dying wretch intreat you To take this letter to my father. My Ifabella! [thee. Could'it thou but hear me, my last words should bless-I cannot the' in death, bequeath her to thee. To Vil. But could I hope my boy, my little one,

Might find a father in thee-Oh, I faint-I can no more-Hear me, Heav'n! Oh! support

My wife, my Ifabella-Bless my child!

And take a poor unhappy -Vil. He's gone-Let what will be the confequence, I'll give it him. I have invo'v'd myfelf, And would be clear'd; that must be thought on now. My care of her is lost in wild amaze. | Going to Ifa.

Are you all dead within there? Where, where are you? Good Nurse, take care of her; I'll bring more help. [Exit.

Isabella comes to berself. D 3

Ifa.

I/a, Where have I been?—Methinks I fland upon The brink of life, ready to shoot the gulph That lies between me and the realms of rest: But still detain'd, I cannot pass the strait; Deny'd to live, and yet I must not die: Doom'd to come back, like a complaining ghost, To my unbury'd body—Here it lies—

[Throws herfelf by Biron's body. My body, foul, and life. A little dust, To cover our cold limbs in the dark grave—There, there we shall sleep safe and sound together.

Vil. Poor wretch; upon the ground! She's not herfelf:
Remove her from the body. [Servants going to raife her.

Isa. Never, never—
You have divore'd us once, but shall no more—
Help, help me, Biron!—Ha!—bloody and dead!
Oh, murder! murder! you have done this deed—
Vengeance and murder! bury us together—
Do any thing but part us.

Vil. Gently, gently raise her. She must be forc'd away.

[She drags the body after her; they get her into their arms, and carry her off.

I/a. Oh; they tear me! Cut off my hands—
Let me leave fomething with him—
They'll clasp him fast—
Oh, cruel, cruel men!

This you must answer one day.

Vil. Good nurse, take care of her. [Nurse follows ber. Send for all helps: all, all that I am worth,

Shall cheaply buy her peace of mind again.

'Be fure you do,

'Just as I order'd you.' The storm grows loud—

[Knocking at the door.

I am prepar'd for it. Now let them in.

Enter Count Baldwin, Carlos, Belford, Friends, with Servants.

C. Bald. Oh, do I live to this unhappy day! Where is my wretched fon?

Car. Where is my brother?

[They see him, and gather about the body. Vil. I hope in heav'n. Car.

Car. Canst thou pity him!
Wish him in heav'n, when thou hast done a deed,
That must for ever cut thee from the hopes
Of ever coming there.

Vil. I do not blame you—You have a brother's right to be concern'd For his untimely death.

Car. Untimely death, indeed!

Vil. But yet you must not say, I was the cause.

Car. Not you the cause! Why who should murder

We do not ask you to accuse yourself; [him?

But I must say that you have murder'd him;

And will say nothing else, till justice draws

Upon our side, at the loud call of blood,

To execute so foul a murder.

Bel. Poor Biron! is this thy welcome home!

Friend. Rife, Sir; there is a comfort in revenge,

Which is left you.

[70 C. Bald.

Car. Take the body hence. [Biron carried off.

C. Bald. What could provoke you?

Vil. Nothing could provoke me

To a base murder, which I find, you think

Me guilty of. I know my innocence;

My servants too can witness that I drew

My sword in his defence, to receive him.

(For all of you I must believe concern'd) Combin'd to murder him out of the way.

Bel. Let the servants be call'd. [fay] Fr. Let's hear what they can fay. Car. What they can fay! Why, what should fervants They're his accomplices, his instruments, And will not charge themselves. If they could do A murder for his fervice, they can lie, Lie nimbly, and fwear hard to bring him off. You fay, you drew your fword in his defence: Who were his enemies? Did he need defence? Had he wrong'd any one? Could he have cause To apprehend a danger, but from you? And yet you rescu'd him !- No, no, he came Unfeafonably, (that was all his crime) Unluckily to interrupt your sport: You were new marry'd-marry'd to his wife; And therefore you, and she, and all of you,

Bel.

Bel. If it is fo

Car. It can be only fo. Fr. Indeed it has a face

Car. As black as hell.

C. Bald. The law will do me justice: find for the Car. I'll go myself for him—

Vil. These strong presumptions, I must own indeed,

Are violent against me; but I have A witness, and on this side heav'n too.

- Open that door.

Door opens, and Pedro is brought forward by Villeroy's Servants.

Here's one can tell you all.

Ped. All, all; fave me but from the rack,

Vil. You and your accomplices defign'd

To murder Biron?—Speak.

Ped. We did.

Vil Did you engage upon your private wrongs, Or were employ'd?

Ped. He never did us wrong.
Vil. You were fet on then?
Ped. We were fet on.

Vil. What do you know of me?
Ped. Nothing, nothing:

You fav'd his life, and have discovered me.

Vil. He has acquitted me.

If you would be refolv'd of any thing,

He tlands upon his answer.

Bel. Who fet you on to act this horrid deed?

C. Bald I'll know the villain; give me quick his Or I will tear it from thy bleeding heart. [name, Ped. I will confess.

C. Bald. Do then.

Ped. It was my master, Carlos, your own fon.

C. Bald. Oh, monfrous! monfrous! monfunnatural!

Bel. Did he employ you to murder his own brother?

Ted. He did; and he was with us when 'twas done.

C. Bald. If this has reason to the same has been as well as the same has been as

C. Bald. If this be true, this horrid, horrid tale, It is but just upon me: Biron's wrongs

Must be reveng'd; and I the cause of all.

Fr What will you do with him?

C. Bald. Take him apart

I know too much.

[Pedro goes in. Vil.

Vil. I had forgot-Your wretched, dying fon Gives it to Baldwin. Gave me this letter for you. I dare deliver it. It speaks of me, I pray to have it read.

C. Bald. You know the hand. Bel. I know 'tis Biron's hand.

Belford reads the letter. C. Bald Pray read it. "SIR, I find I am come only to lay my death at your door. I am now going out of the world; but cannot forgive you, nor my brother Carlos, for not hindering my poor wife Ifabella, from marrying with Villeroy; when you both knew from fo many letters. that I was alive .-

Vil. How! Did you know it then?

C. Bald. A mazement all!

Enter Carlos, with Officers. Oh, Carlos! are you come? Your brother here, Here, in a wretched letter, lays his death To you and me - Have you done any thing To hallen his fad end!

Car. Bless me, Sir, I do any thing! who, I! C. Bald. He talks of letters that were fent to us. I never heard of any-Did you know

He was alive?

Car. Alive! Heaven knows, not I. C. Bald. Had you no news of him, from a report, Or letter, never?

Car. Never, never, I.

Bel. That's strange, indeed: I know he often writ To C. Baldwin. To lay before you the condition Of his hard flavery: and more I know, That he had feveral answers to his letters. He faid, they came from you, you are his brother.

Car. Never, from me. Bel. That will appear.

The letters, I believe, are still about him; For some of 'em I saw but yesterday. C. Bald. What did those answers say?

Bel. I cannot speak to the particulars; But I remember well, the fum of 'em Was much the same, and all agreed, That there was nothing to be hop'd from you: That 'twas your barbarous refolution

To let him perish there. C. Bald. Oh, Carlos! Carlos! hadft thou been a [brother-Car. This is a plot upon me. I never knew

He was in flavery, or was alive,

Or heard of him, before this fatal hour. Bel. There, Sir, I must confront you.

He fent you a letter, to my knowledge, last night; And you fent him word you would come to him-I fear you came too foon.

C. Bald. 'Tis all too plain, -

Bring out that wretch before him. [Pedro produced. Car. Ha! Pedro there! - Then I am caught, indeed. Bel. You flart at fight of him;

He has confess'd the bloody deed. Car. Well then, he has confess'd,

And I must answer it. Bel. Is there no more?

Car. Why!-what would you have more? I know And I expect it. Tthe worst,

C. Bald. Why haft thou done all this?

Car. Why that which damns most men has ruin'd The making of my fortune. Biron stood Between me and your favour: while he liv'd. I had not that; hardly was thought a fon. And not at all a kin to your estate. I could not bear a younger brother's lot, To live depending upon courtefy-Had you provided for me like a father, I had been still a brother.

C. Bald. 'Tis too true; I never lov'd thee as I should have done: It was my fin, and I am punish'd for't. Oh! never may distinction rise again In families: let parents be the fame To all their children; common in their care, And in their love of 'em .- I am unhappy, For loving one too well,

Vil. Youknew your brother liv'd; why did you take Such pains to marry me to Isabella?

Car. I had my reasons for't -Vil. More than I thought you had.

Car. But one was this-

I knew my brother lov'd his wife fo well,

That

That if he ever should come home again, He could not long outlive the lofs of her.

Bel. If you rely'd on that, why did you kill him? Car. To make all fure. Now, you are answer'd all,

Where must I go? Lam tir'd of your questions. C. Bald. I leave the judge to tell thee what thou art; A father cannot find a name for thee. But parricide is highest treason, fure, To facred nature's law; and must be fo, So sentenc'd in thy crimes. Take him away-The violent remedy is found at last,

That drives thee out, thou poison of my blood, Infected long, and only foul in thee. [Carlos led off. Grant me, fweet heav'n! the patience to go thro' The torment of my cure—Here, here begins

The operation-Alas! the's mad. Enter Isabella distracted; her bair dishewell'd; ber little Son afraid of her. Vil. My Ifabella, poor unhappy wretch!

What can I fay to her?

Isa. Nothing, nothing; 'tis a babbling world-I'll hear no more on't. When does the court fit? " I'll not be bought-What! to fell innocent blood?" You look like one of the pale judges here: Minos, or Radamanth, or Æacus-I have heard of you. I have a cause to try, an honest one; Will you not hear it? Then I must appeal To the bright throne - Call down the heav'nly powers To witness how you use me.

· Wom. Help, help, we cannot hold her.

· Vil. You but enrage her more.'

C Bald. Pray give her way, the'll hurt nobody. Isa. What have you done with him? He was here I faw him here. Oh, Biron, Biron! where, [but now; Where have they hid thee from me? He is gone-But here's a little flaming cherubim-

Child Oh, fave me, fave me! [Running to Bald. I/a. The Mercury of Heaven, with filver wings, Impt for the flight, to overtake his ghost, And bring him back again.

Child. I fear, she'll kill me.

C. Bald. She will not hurt thee. [She flings away. 1/a. Will nothing do? I did not hope to find Justice on earth; 'tis not in Heav'n neither. Biron has watch'd his opportunity-Softly; he fleals it from the fleeping gods,

And fends it thus-[Stabs berfelf. Now, now I laugh at you, I defy you all,

You tyrant murderers.

ftoo much. Vil. Call, call for help-Oh, Heav'n! this was C. Bald. Oh, thou most injured innocence! Yet live, Live but to witness for me to the world, How much I do repent me of the wrongs,

Th' unnatural wrongs, which I have heap'd on thec. And have pull'd down this judgment on us all.

Vil. Oh, speak, speak but a word of comfort to me! C. Bald. If the most tender father's care and love Of thee, and thy poor child, can make amends-Oh, yet look up and live.

Isa. Where is that little wretch? [They raise her. I die in peace to leave him to your care. I have a wretched mother's legacy, A dying kifs-pray let me give it him, My bleffing; that, that's all I have to leave thee. Oh, may thy father's virtues live in thee, And all his wrongs be buried in my grave!

Vil. She's gone, and all my joys of life with her.

Where are your officers of justice, now? Seize, bind me, drag me to the bloody bar.

· Accuse, condemn me: let the sentence reach · My hated life ___ No matter how it comes;

. I'll think it just, and thank you as it falls. · Self-murder is deny'd me; elfe how foon

Could I be past the pain of my remembrance! 6 But I must live, grow grey with ling'ring grief, · To die at last in telling this fad tale.

[parents! C. Bald. Poor wretched orphan of most wretched 'Scaping the florm, thou'rt thrown upon a rock, To perish there.' The very rocks would melt, Soften their nature, sure, to foster thee: I find it by myself; my flinty heart, That barren rock, on which thy father starv'd, Opens its springs of nourishment to thee. There's not a vein, but shall run milk for thee. Oh had I pardon'd my poor Biron's fault, His first, his only fault-this had not been!

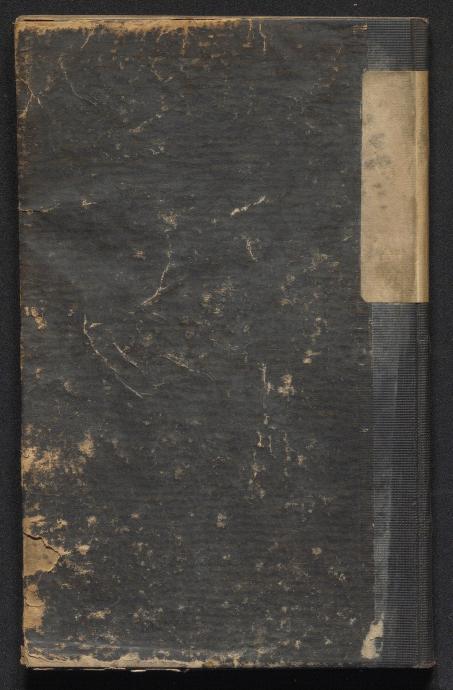

To erring youth there's some compassion due; But while with rigour you their crimes purfue, What's their misfortune, is a crime for you. Hence learn, offending children to forgive: [gative. Leave punishment to Heav'n-'tis Heav'ns prero-THE END.
